Democracy

Posted by S E Aw on 03 Oct 2008 at 12:15 am:

It makes me sad to see the U S as a nation of mainly decent people in such deep trouble. What has worked itself out is the 'Western' style of democracy, which has always carried in its bosom the seed of its own destruction. It has run its course.

Democracy is not about being free to shout from a street corner that we disagree with whatever whoever is doing. Democracy is not about being proud that we can drag into public view wanton behaviour in all its ugly forms - and then acting horrified that anyone can call anything 'wanton' or 'ugly' in a 'truly' democratic society.

Democracy is about being responsible in the use of power and resources. That assumes a certain moral fiber in those who lead and those who follow, whether in politics or business, in public or in private.

Basically, the American people are a trusting lot because of their Christian roots. They have been betrayed by unscrupulous people and a compliant media that has made itself believe it is the arbiter of public norms at home and abroad.

May God have mercy on the United States and help its people recover its faith.

Alien Matters (a response)

It doesn't really matter if aliens did exist, humanity would hunt them down and find a way to kill them because that is what we do, destroy that which we do not understand.

Doesn't Hebrews 1:2 say "by whom also he made the worlds?"

It is one of the great tragedies of Christianity that when faced with a problem like ETs, pastors should sidestep it and consider that the problem is pure science fiction and not worthy of their attention. They would want only to evangelise and 'build up' God's people. It's ironical that they ignore the Lord's and Paul's warnings of the deception in the endtimes. Suppose - just suppose - if ETs are demonic beings from the spiritual world masquerading as ETs from outer space and supposing - just supposing - that they preach another gospel other than that of Christ as Savior - how will these undershepherds face the Lord in that Day for their neglect of warning the flock under their charge. Pastoral pride, mental sloth, the desire to be intellectually acceptable plus a culture of complacency in the modern church spells ruin for the flock. May God have mercy on us all.
